Historic Preservation
Cultural Resources in Derry (1986)

Report by Lynne Emerson Monroe, Historic Preservation Consultant

Cultural Resources in Derry

The Cultural Resources Survey identified approximately 875 structures built in Derry prior to World War II. These individual structures combine with the landscape elements to make up the historic man made and natural environment of Derry.

Derry's development has historically been linked to regional transportation patterns. The first area of settlement was in the village center today, known as EAST DERRY, which was located on the east/west stagecoach road to Portsmouth, which was then the capital of New Hampshire. In 1806 a north/south turnpike was built to the new capital in Concord (Route 28) and a second village center grew up 1 ½ miles west at the intersection of these two routes. Originally distinguished as "Lower Village", this center is now known as DERRY VILLAGE. Forty years later, a new mode of transportation, the railroad came to town. The tracks ran parallel to the turnpike, about 1 ½ miles west and a new village center grew up around the railroad depot, i.e., Derry Depot. This village is today known as WEST DERRY.

These three village centers have distinctly individual characters as defined by the styles of the building popular at their period of development. Each center has survived in a remarkably intact condition.

The Scotch-Irish people who came to settle Derry in the eighteenth century were mostly farmers. Therefore, major industry of the town was agriculture. Throughout the town, large tracts of land were cleared for these farms. During the nineteenth century subsistence farming gave way to specialty farming, primarily dairy and orchards, and in the twentieth century the poultry industry enjoyed a brief popularity. Both the buildings and the landscapes associated with these farms still survive to maintain the character of this segment of Derry's development.

In the last quarter of the nineteenth century, many of Derry's farms were abandoned so that people might go to work in the factories. Some of these farms were bought as summer houses and some remodeling took place during that time as an indication of this.

This was also the era of the streetcar, and the electric railroad brought summer tourists to Derry's lakes and ponds. Cabin colonies grew up on Island Pond, Chases' Grove, Germantown and Beaver Lake. Beaver Lake Lodge survived as an architectural resource from this time period, as did many of the cabin colonies. Other resources, such as the pavilion, have been lost.

Like many towns in the state, Derry developed an industrial base during the nineteenth century; in this case, the shoe industry, which grew in West Derry. Only two factories survive, as testament of this important industry.

Framework for Maintaining Derry's 'Small-Town Character'

The first important step for maintaining the character of Derry has been taken by identifying it in the Cultural Resources Survey. The next step will be to publicize the results of the survey and create an enthusiastic public. Generally, the results of a survey are enthusiastically received by the community. Most people love history and old houses. Once this appetite has been created, encouraging this public to take steps to protect these resources is much simpler. The Historic District Commission will be seen in a leadership role in this program as a newly created Board in the Certified Local Government program for the state. The Commission will be seen as the resource for historic preservation issues, both by town boards and private property owners.

Resource Protection Measures

East Derry: This center has already been listed on the National Register of Historic Places. National register listings give recognition and promote pride, but provide no specific protection for identified properties. The Historic District Commission should define boundaries as identified in the Cultural Resources Survey, and recommend to Town Council that East Derry be considered as a local historic district. The boundaries of this district should be larger than the boundaries of the National Registered District already identified. Besides being governed by the ordinance that the Historic District will create, a public education program for property owners should be undertaken. Good maintenance is a building's best protection. East Derry has an outstanding collection of Federal period buildings. It is architecturally significant and its best protection will be through good continued maintenance.

Derry Village: Derry Village is also predominantly Federal in style, and additionally it has late nineteenth century, early twentieth century residential neighborhoods. Derry Village also boasts an intact brick factory and Pinkerton Academy among its architectural resources. This area is somewhat less intact, due to the rotary which bisected the area in the 1940's. Derry Village should be considered as a local historic district. Its boundaries have been identified on the historic architectural areas map of the Cultural Resources Survey. In addition, property owners should be encouraged to undertake good rehabilitation programs.

West Derry: This area contains the largest concentration of older buildings in town. It grew up around the railroad and the shoe factories, and the growth and expansion of these industries can be read in the distinctive, intact neighborhoods, civic and industrial structures, and a fine commercial district on Broadway, i.e., downtown. Preserving the character of this large area will involve multiple techniques. The first idea would be to create another historic district, but with fewer controls than those suggested for East Derry and Derry Village. The review of the Historic District Commission would be given only on demolition or new construction.

Residential Neighborhoods: New zoning should reflect the historic character of these neighborhoods. When discussing neighborhoods, it is important to work first with a public education program for residents and property owners. Neighborhood organizations can then be created for the understanding, enjoyment and promotion of these fine neighborhoods.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation publishes an excellent newsletter called "Conserve Neighborhoods". In addition to the newsletter, they run conferences and programs for neighborhood leaders. Derry should consider participation in this program. Leadership for this effort might come from the Historic District Commission or from the Derry Planning Office. Various avenues might be explored for identifying neighborhood leadership. If this becomes a priority, the possibilities are limitless. These special areas are one of Derry's primary resources for maintaining a sense of community alive.

Downtown Commercial Center: A variety of late nineteenth, early twentieth century commercial buildings have survived. These are in various states of preservation, having had unfortunate rehabilitation efforts during the last decade. In many cases, the buildings survive in an intact condition on the second stories, while on the first story, storefronts have been replaced with newer, unsympathetic designs. Regional shopping centers and patterns have changed, as commercial strip development has developed on the borders of town and outlying areas. Downtown has some vacancies now.

Downtown has a diversity of uses, as well as visual diversity. Unfortunately, many open spaces have been created, where buildings have been lost to fire and demolition. The filling-in of these spaces should be carefully supervised by the Historic District Commission so that the scale and texture of the streetscape can be reaffirmed.

West Derry is most often defined by its commercial area on Broadway, i.e., its downtown. The downtown area is an important element in identifying the character of Derry – where people shop, go to the post office, go to the Town Hall, and go to the library has a lot to do with their sense of community. If streetscape improvements, such as light fixtures, paving or pedestrian amenities are being considered, the Historic District Commission should be consulted as to their design. A fatal mistake of many downtowns is including Colonial or fake elements from other periods. Derry's downtown is emphatically turn-of-the-century and this unique character has been defined in the Cultural Resources Survey and must be respected when improvements are considered. From time to time, the state makes available money to fund a storefront program. Derry should participate if this possibility arises; or the town might undertake its own program by hiring a qualified architect familiar with this type of work, to make suggestions to various merchants on how to improve their storefronts.

Many techniques exist for helping to revitalize a downtown. Regionally, many communities have conducted successful revitalization programs of their downtowns. Advice is available from the New Hampshire State Historic Preservation Office, Office of State Planning, and Regional Planning Commissions. The National Trust for Historic Preservation has a Mainstreet Program, which offers matching funds for hiring Downtown Managers. Derry might look into this significant program. A downtown Merchant's Association might be formed to promote downtown shopping. A boost in the downtown economy would clearly boost the architectural resources as well.

Two studies were produced in 1984. They were compiled by a team of professionals from Applied Economic Research and Rist-Frost Associates. These studies are titled "Derry Railroad Corridor Feasibility Study, Part One: Economic Analysis" and "Part Two: Feasibility Study". These studies were undertaken as preliminary steps toward revitalizing the downtown. These studies should be utilized and implemented by a Downtown Revitalization Committee. This Committee should be formed of representatives of both the public and private sectors, i.e., a member of the Town Council, the Historic District Commission, the Planning Board, the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchant's Association, a local merchant, a real estate owner, and possibly a developer to name some possibilities. This group could form a steering committee to implement the studies and begin work on the process of revitalization.

Summer Resort Areas: The areas identified on Derry's two lakes might be considered as secondary historic districts. In these areas, the Historic District Commission would have jurisdiction only over demolition and new construction. The guidelines of the commission could address the specific architecture of the cabins at the turn-of-the-century. Property owners could be encouraged, therefore, to maintain their properties in a characteristic and sympathetic manner. These areas are part of the unique character of Derry.

Historic Agricultural Areas: During the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, much of the arable land in Derry was cleared for farming. This process has reversed in the twentieth century, however, and today many of the farms have been abandonded and much of the land is returning to forest cover. To accommodate Derry's considerable housing boom, many of these historic fams have already been bought and subdivided.

The Cultural Resources Survey identified nearly a dozen areas where the historic agricultural character of Derry was still remarkably intact. In these areas, the landscape combines with the historic farms to present a wonderful picture of the agricultural heritage of the town. Driving or walking through these areas, it is possible to recall the days before the housing boom.

A current survey of the open land in Derry shows 50 parcels in the ownership of 30 to 35 people. Some of this land is used by two dairy farms, which still operate; half a dozen market garden farms, some orchards, and several horse farms (a recent trend). The balance of open land which is not owned by the farmers, is rented by them and used for crops, such as hay, alfalfa and corn. The availability of this land is especially important for dairy farmers who are unable to afford to own the amount of acreage they need. Indeed, the important dairy industry may be on the verge of extinction in Derry.

Open agricultural land is the single resource which contributes to the character of Derry that is in the greatest present danger. Therefore, the Historic Preservation Committee spent a great deal of time exploring the individual techniques available for protecting land. These techniques include municipal land use controls such as historic districting; agricultural zoning; land evaluation and its site assessment (LESA); the right-to-farm law; site plan review combined with cluster development and planned unit development; performance standards; and transferable development rights. It was the consensus of the committee that a combination of these techniques would be helpful in achieving their goal. However, the disadvantages of most of these techniques was that they would require considerable professional expertise. This would mean additional volunteer efforts and/or staff in the town Planning Department to initiate and manage these programs. Nevertheless, the Committee felt that an investment in a part-time or full-time staff person to handle these programs, would be well worthwhile in the benefit gained by undertaking these protection measures.

The Committee also investigated private incentives and programs that could augment the community's efforts. A private/public partnership could be formed, which could increase the potential for protecting open land. These techniques included the formation of local development corporations, and revolving funds to be managed by a local development corporation. The local development corporation can include land trusts; the problem again was the need for staff time. Other private possibilities included estate planning; easements; covenants and deed restrictions; and outright acquisition by both public and private sectors.

The overall concept of partial development was looked on favorably as the strongest possibility. The advantage of this concept is that it involves the establishment of an informal partnership among the landowner, local conservation groups, the developer and the bank responsible for financing the package. This approach is beneficial because it allows fair compensation to the large property owner and provided for new housing, while protecting land resources critical to the community.

The recommendation of the Historic Preservation Committee, therefore, is that an ongoing group, a Landscape Preservation Committee be formed to begin the actual implementation of land protection. This group should have representatives from both public and private sectors.

Other Possibilities

With the development of these implementation techniques, the remaining sections of Community Goal #2 and #10 have been met. Other elements of the Master Plan should be reviewed for compatibility with historic preservation goals. These include:

Transportation Many of the roads and highways in Derry represent historic routes of travel. These roads should be given special consideration. Some areas have been identified on the map as scenic agricultural and historic areas. Every effort should be made to divert traffic away from these historic routes, rather than widening them to accommodate increased traffic through the area. Highway and road improvement can potentially have serious impact on the integrity of Cultural Resources. Forethought and flexibility should be the watch words when dealing with such improvements. The Department of Public Works and Highways should be informed that Derry now has a complete Cultural Resources Inventory. This will help them in the pre-designed stage so that Derry can be assured that these resources will be given full consideration during corridor and design hearings.

Derry has serious traffic problems that must be addressed. One possibility that does not seem to have been explored is the possibility of mass transit. Regional studies have been and are being done, and Derry might consider stronger participation, even leadership, in these efforts. A mass transit system could be beneficial to all parts of town.

Recreation Derry's ponds and parks have been a source of recreation throughout its history. These historic uses should be maintained and encouraged. Town facilities in West Derry include tennis courts and a lake front recreational center. The development of more such resources is encouraged. The historic railroad corridor has been abandoned and should be maintained in an open condition. This corridor provides a scenic/historic recreation possibility.

The area known as English Range, progressing down through Chester Road, Beaver Lake to East Derry and south of East Derry center is amazingly intact. This scenic section could be enhanced by a series of bicycle paths and/or trails. A brochure highlighting the historic and scenic uses could be prepared to highlight the community's most outstanding assets.

Community Facilities The town should conduct a space-needs inventory and compare it with the space existing in some of its historic structure. For instance, the town owns the significant Adams Memorial Building, which has a particularly high uses as a theatre or arts center. A study report of the feasibility of reusing this building, produced in 1982, will be very helpful with this project. The Capital Improvements Program should reflect the needs of these buildings, for maintenance and rehabilitation.

It is important that the implementation efforts of other phases of the Master Plan, such as transportation, economic development, and downtown revitalization, be coordinated with the cultural preservation efforts outlined in this segment of Derry's Master Plan.

SIGNIFICANCE (relate to major themes/contexts):
Summer residence of a R. C. priest, Father Glenn, in 1920's. Although much modified, this would appear to be the Beal House, a small Greek Revival Cape. The addition of a summer porch indicates a link to summer use. It was known to have been used as such by Father Glenn, a Roman Catholic priest in the 1920's.

indicates an early 19th Century construction date. Its located on Hampstead Road, a major thoroughfare through town. Originally an agricultural property, today it is primarly residential and the character of the road has changed as it handles modern automobile traffic. The small building to the north was a store during the 1920's, run by Benjamin Houston. B. H. Houston is the owner indicated on the 1892 map. The house has been in the ownership of the Houston family for nearly 100 years.

pedimented gable, and full entablature at the cornice supported by paneled pilasters. 6/6 and 9/6 sash are surrounded by plain surrounds surmounted with gently sloping window caps. The center entry has full length sidelights, flanked by pilasters supporting a full entablature. The gable roof is pierced by twin chimneys and the house is supported by a granite foundation. An ell extends to the south, and connects to a large gable entry barn which features brackets in its projecting eaves. The entire complex serves as a focal point on Hampstead Road. It is exquisitely preserved and likely individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.

the house was purchased in 1783 by James Choat and a letter written by Mrs. Choat states that the house had been built for about 50 years; interior inspection would be necessary to support this evidence. Architecturally, the house now shows elements typical of the late 18th Century, including 9/9 multi-paned sash and a Georgian style doorway flanked by pilasters supporting an entablature. The door itself it a 6 panel Federal style door. The chimney pattern is more Federal period than Georgian, twin inset chimneys, large fireplace chimneys centrally located on the ridgeline. In the 20th Century the house has continued as part of a working dairy farm right up until the present: One of the very few operating dairy farms surviving in Derry. The addition of asbestos siding, probably in the first quarter of the 20th Century has changed the look of the house somewhat. It has been allowed to deteriorate and the weed and vegetation have grown up around it. Nonetheless, it is an important and significant contributing structurre to Derry's 18th Century housing stock.

The application of synthetic siding and shutters has marred the overall effect, but not damaged the integrity of the house. Historically, local legend has it that an occupant of the house was known as "Soap Man Rand". He was a tin peddler and apparently quite a local character in the countryside and he collected waste fat from the farmers, turning it into soap here at this farm.

distinguishing feature is its elaborate center entry featuring full length sidelights and transom around the door, flanked by pilasters supporting a full entablature. The house has a somewhat unusual configuration; it may be that its roof was raised at some point. The projecting eaves on all sides give it a curious hat-like effect. The center chimney shows to have been a stove chimney in old photographs, but is a somewhat larger fireplace chimney now. A new wing has been added and is of almost equal proportions to the main block. The house has a much more residential suburban character than it does a farm character.

Some smaller-paned sash has been added as well. The length of the complex presents a striking focal point at the corner of Island Pond Road and Warner Hill Road. The house is clearly one of the most significant architectural examples of the 18th Century surviving in Derry.

house, but used to be located at the corner of Island Pond Road and Warner Hill Road and may have been moved sometime after the road changed configuration about 1850 or 1860. The study of map data also makes this somewhat unclear, as there is no house in this location in 1857. The high brick foundation and the evidence of the earlier photograph which shows 2/2 windows and a 20th Century porch, which has now been removed, indicates that it's either a much later construction date, say 1870, or that it was moved during that time period and remodeled to give it that look. Today, the house and farm are surrounded by expanses of open land and there are outstanding vistas sweeping to the southwest.

It is also possible that the map data is incorrect for both of these houses, and that they may be from a somewhat earlier time period. Interior inspection would be necessary to prove or disapprove these suppositions. Nonetheless, its site is extraordinary, and the picket fence which has been recently installed is a particularly nice touch, and it is a significant contributor to Derry's housing stock.

cabins, known as Germantown. It seems to have been settled about 1900 and contains about 30 small cabins in a variety of rustic vernacular styles. They have been well maintained, and the lifestyle in this colony continues very much as it originally did. For their primary features, are exposed rafters, some small detailing at the eaves on occasion, shingles, hipped roofs and jerkinhead, and most support a small stove chimney, which was probably used for both cooking and heating. They are not set on full foundations, but rather on posts. Most are along the lake shore, and difficult to view by just driving into the colony. The colony itself is significant and intact, and should be preserved for the future.

indeed be later. It is likely that it was originally a 5 bay Federal or even Georgian style Cape, and that the second story addition with dormers was added say in the last part of the 19th Century. One of Derry's earliest summer settlements is Chases's Grove, on the shore of Island Pond. It is clearly named after the Chase family, which was prominent in this area. It is a cluster of perhaps 50 small summer cabins. They feature exposed rafters, a variety of roofstyles -- hip. gambrel, jerkinhead. Most of them are very small for slight summer use only. The area has maintained its integrity, a very little contemporary building, and is well worthy of consideration for preservation in the town of Derry.

thin Greek Revival muntin, 9/6 configuration. The center entry is Georgian in style with pilasters supporting an entablature and a transom over the door. A later porch extends off one gable end and is supported by tapering Doric columns. The shed roof dormers on the front slope are from this century. The house and site have retained their integrity and contribute to the 19th Century character of this section of Lawrence Road.

The Victorian detailing, which now predominates, includes the 2/2 sash and partial entablatures over the first story windows; the single story porch supported by turned posts and drop pendant brackets at the center entry. Part of the extraordinary formation of the house are the attached carriage sheds which extend dramatically away from one gable end. Architecturally, it is unusual in that it is a 3 by 3 bay configuration. It may in fact have been remodeled at some time. A recent fire has done serious damage to the interior, but the basic proportions of the house are exactly the same. The site is still surrounded by acres of open land and farm land and it serves as an important part of an historic agricultural area.

and full transom. The sash was replaced in the late 19th Century by 2/2 sash. Some of the extensive out buildings still exist. The old photographs show a treelined drive with orchards and stoned walls, a picket fence and a picture of Deacon Joseph Montgomery with an extraordinary pair of black horses hitched to his carriage. The site is the last left on the Fordway Extension towards the border of Derry.

architecture and was probably built somewhat at the same time as the turnpike was, c. 1810. It has classic Federal proportions, 5 by 2 bay with a very shallow hipped roof and what survives shows that originally would have had 4 corner fireplace chimneys. The window sash was replaced in the late 19th Century to 2/2 sash and a doorhood of approximately the same vintage and front porch survive. 19th Century. Architecturally the house has Federal proportions, a 5 by 2 bay, 2½ story configuration, with some details that suggest influence of the Greek Revival such as slight cornice returns in the gable. It also was remodeled late in the 19th Century, receiving an Italianate doorhood with heavy drop pendant brackets and later window sash, 2/2. Extending in a southerly direction is a long series of wings to small barns creating a great length along the road. These buildings would have been associated with the blacksmith shop. until it's sold in the late 19th Century to the Hardy family, who still maintains it. Architecturally its proportions are somewhat unusual due to the evolution of the house, its facade having 6 bays across, but the small proportion of hipped roof is a distinctly Federal characteristic. The large chimney looks original and a smaller chimney somewhat later 19th Century addition. The entry is exceptional. The Federal 6 panel door flanked by half length sidelights surmounted by a semi-elliptical fanlight all flanked by pilasters supporting an entablature with reeding detail in its frieze. styles such as the soul effigy, death's head, hourglass, and vines. Notable are the Rev. David MacGregor gravestone, which bears his portrait; the Gregg family stones with their well executed soul effigies covered by "umbrella" shaped carvings; and the James (1781) and Agnes (1742) Ewins stone which has one of the more ornate soul effigy carvings. The effigy is surrounded by a temple with Greek style pillars and a triangular pediment. Over the effigy is an hourglass turned on its side. The cemetery has a number of double gravestones, such as the Robert and Rebeccah Montgomery stone (1775 and 1769 respectively) and the James and Sarah Adams stone (1781 and 1778), each of which has a soul effigy above the husband's grave and a portrait over the wife's. The Montgomery effigy is further decorated with a winged hourglass and a bird, probably a dove, on top of the hourglass. There are also an interesting variety of death's heads, and a large number of stones decorated simply with rosettes, diamond, heart, and caskets shapes, as well as small shovels, skulls, and crossbones, and flowering vines. Dr. Philip Godfrid Kust's stone, with an elaborate carving including a compass, square, and hand holding a trowel suggests the man's occupation of mason.

transitional Greek Revival house to date from 1820. This is deduced from its 5 by 2 bay, 2½ story proportions, its 6/6 sash with narrow Greek Revival muntons. Old photographs show it to have been elaborately detailed during the Victorian period with its out buildings ornamented with tall spired cupolas. The overall effect was quite extraordinary and enhanced by a picket fence on all sides. The house still makes a striking picture with its ell and out buildings, and contributes to the East Derry streetscape.

village landmark. It was moved down the hill in 1885 when construction of the red brick academy began.

The 2 story 5 bay school exhibits original Greek Revival features. Significant details include a 3 bay entrance pavillon with full pediment, flush clapboards and Greek Revival crown and entablature. This Greek Revival pavillon and the belfry were added to the rectangular school in 1928, shortly after the building's initial construction.

l Hildreth, principal of Pinkerton Academy from 1819 to 1846, built this house ar the old academy. It was moved to this site in 1883.

The central portion of the house is a typical 2 story, 5 bay Federal style configuration with twin chimneys and a simple crown and entablature over the door.

The large 2-story wing on a concrete foundation is a 20th century addition.

The addition of synthetic siding has altered the original character of this house..

lines were abandoned and the town center moved west again. By 1900 much of the turnpike was impassable and in 1937 it was rebuilt. This section of the turnpike, directly north of the village center is characterized by its original early 19th century developement pattern.

The Federal style house became the property of Pinkerton Academy in 1881. The original 5-bay 2-story house retains its clapboards, and door crown. The ell was greatly enlarged and the side porch added early in the 20th century.

This building occupies a prominent spot on Thornton Square. An early store occupied this site, burning in 1855. Association Hall was a project of the Derry Building Company who hired a Mr. Gregg as architect. The building originally contained a basement adapted for trade, two first story stores, a second floor'Association Hall' with a large dance floor and a third floor -Masonic Hall. The building's original features are remarkably intact including the original clapboards, Mansard roof, dormers, paired brackets in the eaves, twin entrances and square storefront windows.

a rather plain house but has several paired windows, 1 story bays and paired brackets in the eaves and under flat window crowns. The original porch and doors have been removed. Crescent Street, so named for its shape, laid out in 1829, links Brpadway to Pinkerton Street. Originally named Church Street, it contained only the Congregational Church for several decades. In the late 19th and early 20th Century, after the town center moved to West Derry, the street developed into its current residential neighborhood. Crescent Street is an intact turn-of-the-century street with houses ranging in style from simple bungalows to high street Italianate.

and craftsman details such as exposed rafters, cut-away bays, and brackets. The form was often augmented by a pavillion either centered or to one side. Crescent Street, so named for its shape, laid out in 1829, links Broadway to Pinkerton Street. Originally named Church Street, it contained only the Congregational Church for several decades. In the late 19th and early 20th Century, after the town center moved to West Derry, the street developed into its current residential neighborhood. Crescent Street is an intact turn-of-the-century street with houses ranging in style from simple bungalows to high style Italianate.

George Pinkerton built this house circa 1935 on the site of a hatter's shop. The Molly Reid Chapter of the D. A. R. has occupied the house since 1936.

Dormers, a second story bay window and pedimented entrance porch are later additions to the original 5 bay, 2 story Federal style residence with twin chimneys.

In 1881 the bank and post office moved into Charles Bartlett's new building. After 1900 Charles Bartlett operated a pharmacy and post office in the building until his death in 1925. The post office remained here until 1945.

The building, now a residence, retains its original late 19th century storefront, clapboards and trim. It remains an excellent reminder of the early commercial importance of North Main Street.

Derry News began in 1846. Mr. Bartlett was publisher, his cousin editor. In 1881 building moved to back of the lot and new front houses stationery and book store, drug store and Post office. in 1945 post office moved to Village Store. continued from the early 19th to early 20th century.

The bungalow, one of the last American styles adapted to worker housing, was popular in America during the first two decades of the 20th century. Many variations occur, but bungalows are distinguished by their rectangular one story configuration, with low hipped roof and dormer. First floor porches, often enclosed, were popular. A few exhibit craftsman details such as exposed rafters, cobblestone,chimneys and shingles on the exterior.

The bungalow, one of the last American styles adapted to worker housing, was popular in America during the first two decades of the 20th century. Many variations occur, but bungalows are distinguished by their rectangular one story configuration, with low hipped roof and dormer. First floor porches, often enclosed, were popular. A few exhibit craftsman details such as exposed rafters, cobble-stone chimneys and shingles on the exterior.

This sidehall plan in either $1\frac{1}{2}$ or $2\frac{1}{2}$ story (often kneewall) configuration began with the Greek Revival c. 1820 and continued in Derry into the 20th century. In the late 19th century it is often augmented with a polygonal bay and doorhead, a wing or ell and a small barn for the family horse.

Many of these were enlarged as the central location became more desirable.

This residence was constructed on the site of the James Greg stone garrison house, possibly the first home in the village. The original front door was on the south side of the house because East Derry road ran to that side. Shortly afterwards a room was added to the north and the entrance moved to that side. The hipped roof and 12 over 12 windows distinguish this early house. The massive central chimney is no long extent. The house originally sat on a 35 acre parcel.

The original character of this house has been obliterated by the first floor remodeling, but it occupied an important place in 19th Century Derry. This residence was constructed by a Mr. Adams who owned the neighboring grist mill, For manyyears this house was attached to the mill by a long shed. The mill was demolished in 1930 ending an era of mills on the site which began with the 1719 village settlement.

buildings. Many of these were enlarged as the central location became more desirable.

This building was originally part of the Joseph Gregg carpenter and Currier Shop and was set back on the stream. In 1869 Benjamin Chase enlarged the structure for his wo[illegible]rking factory, abandoning it for a better site in 1882. H. R. Underhill used the building for his edged tool business. In 1908 the front half of the building was moved forward and converted to apartments. The building has weathered many eras in Derry Village from its beginnings as a regional center to the turn of the century housing boom.

The Manchester and Lawrence branch was opened about 1848. The first Depot was burned in a disastrous fire in 1882 and was replaced by the present one which at first stood close to the Broadway crossing. It was later moved a few yards down the track and after the closing of the branch to passenger service, became the law office of Attorney George H. Grinneel in 1957. The Chester and Derry railroad was opened in 1896 and the schedule of the electric cars was set to match the trains from Boston and Manchester. Patronage was good until the advent of the automobile. Business declined, and line abandoned in 1928. Eight round-trips a day, with a fare of 20¢ for the 7 3/4 mile ride. The small second-hand cars were ridiculed as "Tooverville Trolleys" but they did valient duty over the years. Derry terminal was in the railroad station yard. (Newell, West Derry, p. 5)

"Depot" soon developed as the town's new center and Broadway became a thriving commercial street.

A small brick building was absorbed when a market was built. This had been a water station for the railroad engines -- the supply coming from a wheel on higher land up anning Street. For many years Harry W. Wilson conducted a successful meat market here -- preceded by Brackett and Ferrin. Quarters above were used for a restaurant, perhaps the best remembered operater was Gary Chadwick. Block now owned by Harold Goss, who uses a section of it for a laundromat. Other half is office of Attorney Joseph V. Stancik.

Part of Hood Milk, storage and shipping. It should be recalled that quick cooling of milk was to come to the industry in due course. In storage was the earliest means of refrigeration and that required a large ice house for burying fifty-pound cakes of ice in sawdust until needed. A year's supply had to be harvested in a short time every winter. The Hood Farm had a pond, an ice house, a large creamery and leased railroad cars for milk packed in ice chips, in a complex on Manning Street, Derry Depot.

The building was erected by Arthur Greenrogh about 1909 and had many tenants over the years. In the meantime, Fred L. George had bought the block and it is still owned by his estate and rented to First National States. Presold property and after many changes the Derry Cooperative Bank was incorporated in 1915 and was housed with the First National Bank in the Whitney Block (now Aubuchon). In 1917 it moved with the First National Bank to the present location of the Indian Head National Bank on East Broadway. It later moved to its own quarters in the Young Block and was burned out in the fire of February, 1963. It relocated in the modernized Holmes and Wheeler Building and joined the Derry Bank and Trust Company in a building -- a modern banking facility on Crystal Avenue @ entrance of Hood Plaza. This is a branch of the Derry Bank and Trust on Crystal Avenue.

arriving in Derry c. 1850 ushered in a prosperous era. Derry "Depot" soon developed as the town's new center and Broadway became a thriving commercial street.

First on this site was the Currier home, later known as the McAllister House, which was moved back to a position on McAllister Court to make room for the new Bank building erected in 1917 by E. L. Davis, J. C. MacMurphy and F. N. Young. The first banking institution in town was in a brick building on Main Street, East Derry. Opened in 1829 and after the railroad was laid through Derry, the bank moved to Derry Depot and occupied space in the west side of the house owned by David Currier, an official of the institution. In 1906 the First National Bank was established and was located where the Aubuchon Store now is. In 1917 it moved into the building @ 20 East Broadway.

several steps higher than the sidewalk level and some years later the top floors were removed and the store enlarged by carrying the front out to the sidewalk line; the steps remaining inside the building, which was the Army and Navy Store. While Mr. Cutler was in possession he gave a permit to Alfred H. Morse to erect a small building on the corner lot for a bakery, with the privilege of doing the cooking in the basement of the store. Some later owners were A. C. Davis, Hatch and Hanks, and Mr. Hatch alone. At the present time the former bakery is known as "Mamie's" and is stocked with women's garments. It is operated by Mr. & Mrs. Samuel H. Gross. Both stores have been owned for many years by the heirs of Fred L. George, but recently have been purchased by Arthur Margolis.

Echo Lodge #61 I. O. O. F. was instituted at Masonic Hall, Derry Village, 1879. The next year the Lodge began to hold its meetings in the new Pillsbury and Hardy block close to the railroad. This was burned in 1882 and in about two years a new building was erected on the present site. In 1879 fire again devastated the Home of the Order and it was replaced by the present brick building. Among those who occupied stores in the Odd Fellows block are V. H. Moody, George Allgaier, Claire and Bidwell, and Bartlett's 5 & 10. At present, both sections are occupied by J. J. Newberry and Co..

The Odd Fellows block and the Young block were burned February 27, 1963. Frank N. Young built this block in 1895. He had been using a small wooden building between his home and the I. O. O. F. block for a bakery, which caught fire one night, taking with it in flames the adjacent building. Mr. Young then built a brick faced block, which at first had 3 stores in it. Now there are but 2, one having recently been occupied by Godins 5 & 10. The other, since 1960 has been the headquarters for the Derry Cooperative Bank. In 1962 the Godin Company sold the block to the Twenty-Five Associates of Nashua. The land was cleared and the mini-mall appeared.

"Depot" soon developed as the town's new center and Broadway became a thriving commercial street.

Here was once located a large 3 story building, owned by George L. Webster, in which he had a stove and living quarters. This, while owned by Wallace H. Nichols, local dentist, was moved around the corner to a site on Wall Street to make room for a new brick block for use of the A & P Stores. When the present building was opened, Max Fish, tailor occupied the west part, and he was followed by other tenants, but the A & P kept the east section until they moved to Crystal Avenue in 1958. Since then, Basil Papp has owned the entire structure, renting ½ to the Beneficial Finance Company and using the other part himself for Diane's Restaurant. Now the building is housing an Insurance Company.

It was built by George H. Johnson on land bought from the H. P. Hood Company after a few years residence there. Mr. Johnson sold it to John Folsom in 1892. After a quarter of a century, George M. Call obtained the title which passed to Dr. Carr in 1924. Following his death in 1962 the place was bought by Theodore A. Hattin.

I believe the Annis Grain Company of Londonderry had a grain store there prior to the Merrimac Farmers Exchange. I know that the front part of the building where "Ozzies" now is, was a grocery store run by the Annis Company.

Victorian houses with irregular plans and elaborate details. This sidehall plan in either $1\frac{1}{2}$ or $2\frac{1}{2}$ story (often kneewall) configuration began with the Greek Revival c.1820 and continued in Derry into the 20th Century. In the late 19th Century it is often augmented with a polygonal bay and doorhead, a wing or ell and a small barn for the family horse. Leslie E. Shannon built this house in 1889 and in 1901 it was bought by Sidney B. Silman. Owners since have been William L. Wheeler, Earl B. Hart, William O. Shaw for 0 years, Ransom E. Smith from 1951 to 1962. Joseph Hanson is the present owner.

The addition of synthetic siding has altered the original character of this house. At one time this place was the home of William Kimball and the barn was later moved to the next lot (#5) made into a house and occupied by Mr. Kimball. Benjamin Stevens owned this home for several years.

BARN FOR THE FAMILY HORSE. This neighborhood developed circa 1895 as trolley, electric and water service extended to this central neighborhood. Styles range from a simple 1½ story side hall entry, many built by John Hardy, to high Victorian houses with irregular plans and eleaborate details. Elegantly embellished with original shingles in the gable, cutaway bays and porch details, this two story house retains its integrity.

The 2½ story four square plan house was popular in residential neighborhoods throughout the country. In Derry it varied from unadorned to highly augmented with Queen Anne and Craftsman details such as exposed rafter, cut-away bays, and brackets. The form was often augmented by a pavillion either centered or to one side.

The addition of synthetic siding has altered the original character of this house.

This rusticated cement block house, the first of its kind in town was built by William H. Carpenter. The odd roof pitch caused neighbors to call the house the depot. The house is a superb example of the bungalow style with a steep roof, toothed trim and dormer windows. It is a rare example of the bungalow style. (over)

The 2½ story four square plan house was popular in residential neighborhoods throughout the country. In Derry it varied from unadorned to highly augmented with Queen Anne and Craftsman details such as exposed rafters, cut-away bays, and brackets. The form was often augmented by a pavillion either centered or to one side.

The addition of synthetic siding has altered the original character of this house.

This was the former Episcopal Rectory - which was #18 Oak Street.

The streets are lined with concrete sidewalks and mature shade trees. In 1892 the school district constructed the one story, seven bay clapboard school, distinguished by a pedimented portico, cupola, six over six sash windows and a simple wood trim. The school was enlarged by raising the building and building a new first story. The school is an important remnant from Derry's turn of the century era of rapid expansion.

In 1892 the town school district purchased a tract of land for a new school house and the one on West Broadway not being suffieient to care for the needs of the district. At first the building was only one story in heightt but some years later the number of class rooms was increased by the addition of a second story.

After the contruction of the Grinnell Elementary School in 1952 the Oak Street building was abandoned for school purposes and was leased to the H. E. Harris Stamp Company, which does a thrieving business in packaging cancelled stamps for collectors in all parts of the world.

It is now an apartment house.
